ONE DEAD IN HILL - BILLY SHOOTING

TWO NEW LENOX FAMILY HEADS ENGAGE IN KENTUCKY STYLE FEUD SHOOTING IN TAVERN

A typical hill billy type of feud shooting with quick-on-the-trigger action characteristic of this type of gun fighting flared up in New Lenox following a drinking bout Sunday afternoon resulting in the death of one man and injury of another.

The hill-billy feud apparently started back in the mountains of Kentucky and the over-dose of fire water brought out a pent up streak of rage with death in the wake.

According to the stories told in New Lenox the Calvin Rowe and Henry Robbins families had a drinking party Saturday night and Sunday two of the members of the families involved got on the war path.

Henry Robbins and his brother Earle entered a side door of the George Osmus tavern on the Lincoln Highway in New Lenox about 2:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Walter Osmus was tending bar. Suddenly the front door of the dance hall, located in front of the bar-room, opened and Calvin Rowe, aged 35, entered with a drawn .22 target pistol and seeing the Robbins brothers started cursing and is said to have remarked "I am going to kill you".

Henry Robbins is said to have replied "Now Calvin you would not do that" whereupon the latter's erstwhile friend started shooting. Two bullets found their mark in Henry Robbins left arm and two more went wild.

Robbins returned the fire quickly with a .32 revolver. A number of his shots went wild and shot out the front window of the dance hall, but the final shot struck Rowe underneath the heart and he fell to the floor with a gasp and his pistol dropped on the floor beside the body.

The Robbins brothers stepped out of the side door of the tavern and disappeared. Walter Osmus who had sought shelter from the bullets by hiding underneath the bar, came out of his hiding place as also did George Moore, a customer who had just entered the tavern before the shooting began, and seeing that Rowe was apparently dead, they summoned Dr. Jeanette Holt of New Lenox. The sheriff's and coroner's offices in Joliet were notified and the county officials were soon on the scene.

The deputies went out to the Robbins home south of New Lenox and arrested James Robbins, 59 years old and his son Earl, 25 years old. Both were locked up in the Will County jail in Joliet.

The elder Robbins was carrying a shotgun and was on his way to New Lenox when arrested.

The wounded man was not found until Monday morning about nine o'clock when he was picked up on the Michael Lawlor farm near Spencer southeast of New Lenox by Louis Hoffman, deputy sheriff of New Lenox township.

The wounded man was taken to Manhattan to a doctor's office for treatment and then removed to the county jail. Monday night an operation was performed by Dr. Londo Brannon to remove a .22 calibre slug from the bone of his left arm, a bullet that was fired by Rowe.

At the coroner's inquest held in New Lenox Tuesday morning no motive for the slaying was unearthed. As a rule mountaineers are close-mouthed as to the cause of feuds. The coroner's jury exonerated Henry Robbins who had been arrested on a murder warrant charging him with the killing of Rowe, declaring he fired the fatal shot in self defense as Rowe had threatened to kill him and was the first to begin shooting.

The reaction from the operation prevented Robbins from testifying at the inquest, although his signed statement was read to the jurors who were Guy Knickerbocker, A. W. Walsh, Alfred Emily, George Marshall and Art Roswell, all of New Lenox.

In all about a dozen shots were fired in the Osmus tavern and it was a lucky thing that no one was walking by the place at the time the shots came through the dance room windows.

The dead man is survived by his widow, two small children and his parents who reside in Kentucky, 25 miles from a railroad. A telegram was sent to them Sunday night telling them of their son's death.

Henry Robbins who is said to live in Joliet has a wife and four children.

State's Attorney Wm. R. McCabe of Will County, who with Dr. Kingstom, the coroner, questioned the various witnesses, indicated that Robbins, his father, James Robbins and his brother Earl would be released from custody unless the state decided to prosecute on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

The body of Rowe was shipped Tuesday night to Kentucky for burial.

The families of the men involved are the innocent victims and sufferers of this foolish, hot-headed hill-billy shooting scrape.

FETED ON GOLDEN EVENT IN CHURCH

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Feil of Frankfort were married fifty years ago Tuesday of this week in the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena by the Rev. C. Schaub.

The golden event was celebrated and the couple feted in the parlors of the St. Peter's Evangelical church in Frankfort Sunday afternoon. Fifty-four guests attended the anniversary party. Rev. G. Gerhold, pastor of the St. Peter's Evangelical church made a very befitting address for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Feil have been life long residents of this section.

Mother Of 4 Small Children Commits Suicide

Mrs. Mary Lucas, 37 years old, of Orland Park, mother of four small children, died in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet Tuesday afternoon as the result of her double attempt at suicide in her home on a farm southeast of Orland Park Monday morning.

Mrs. Lucas sought death by drinking a half cup of muriatic acid and lysol disinfectant and then slashing her throat with a razor. Her husband brought her to Silver Cross hospital.

Dr. E. G. McMahon of Mokena, who was the attending physician, considered the woman's chances for recovery as doubtful from the beginning. There was apparently no danger from the throat wound, but the poison proved fatal.

Louis Lucas, the husband, could give no reason for his wife's suicide.

Santa Claus Is Coming To-Night

Don't miss seeing Santa tonight at the Mokena auditorium. The evening will start at 7:30 with a very short P. T. A. meeting to which everyone is heartily invited. Promptly at 8 a program, given by the school children will begin.

Teachers and children have been working for weeks to give you, their parents and friends, a happy evening filled with the spirit of Christmas. Show your appreciation by coming and bringing your friends with you.

Santa will be laden with goodies for every girl and boy present. There is no admission charge but a free-will offering will be taken.

FHA Official Making Survey

Gordon W. Dougherty, field representative of the Federal Housing Administration was in Mokena Wednesday making a survey to determine possibilities of new home construction for spring.

Under the FHA single mortgage system any one who can qualify can build a home or refinance the present mortgage on existing homes over a period of 20 years on monthly payments.

Mokena Special Bond Issue Carries

The special bond issue for $3000 voted on at a special election Thursday, carried. The total vote cast was 89 out of which 72 votes were in favor of the proposition.

The bond issue will make it possible for the village to meet its obligations and continue future improvements.

Bank Job Awarded To Frankfort Man

Emil G. Tewes of Frankfort was granted full contract for the air conditioning of the Jefferson Park National Bank on the north side in Chicago this week. Several other residential jobs on the north shore also are to be air conditioned it has been learned.

Tinley Firemen Plan For Big Masquerade

The Tinley Park Volunteer Fire Department will sponsor their popular annual prize masquerade at the Saenger hall in Tinley Park on Saturday night, January 18th. Grand march will start at 11 p. m. Music will be by the Starved Rock Harmony Kings. These masquerades of the Tinley Firemen always draw very large crowds.

Mokena Business Men Will Give 2 Weekly Prizes

The Mokena Business Men's Association held their monthly meeting Monday night in the C. A. Mitchell Club room. It was voted to split the $20 weekly award, so that beginning with January 11, 1936 the weekly award will consist of $15 as first prize and $5 the second prize. In the event the second prize is not claimed, it will be added to the first prize the second week.

The time of giving out the award has been changed from 9:15 p. m. to 9:00 p. m. with a 15 minute deadline in which the prize winner is to claim the award.

The Association re-nominated all the present officers. The election and installation of officers will be held at the next regular monthly meeting to be held in January.

Shot Gun Held At Body Is Action For Divorce

The past week Mrs. Minnie F. Bettenhausen of Frankfort township filed suit for divorce against her husband Fred O. Bettenhausen, charging that on November 20, 1934 she was forced to leave her husband when he held a shot gun up against her body. The couple was married in Mokena September 14, 1927 and Mrs. Bettenhausen, who is represented by George N. Blatt, Jr., asks custody of two children.

Will County Republicans Hear Col. Knox

Scoring the New Deal for its profligate spending spree and unkept campaign pledges, Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, delivered a message filled with common sense at the Republican luncheon and reception held Thursday afternoon in the Elks buildings, Joliet, under the joint auspices of the Will County Republican Central committee and the Young Men's Republican committee.

Precinct committeemen, chairmen of the various Women's Republican organizations from all over the state attended the gathering. Representatives, senators and other political dignitaries were present.

Following the luncheon Col. Knox delivered a highly interesting address in which he pointed out that there is no time now for temporizing with the vital issues of the day and that a wave of resentment against the New Deal is sweeping the nation from coast to coast. He pointed out that adherence to the principles and policies of the Republican party will bring the nation back to prosperity. He further pointed out that the encouragement of individual initiative and encouragement of private business will mean that all the unemployed will be absorbed by private business.

The Will County Republican Central Committee passed and endorsed resolutions endorsing the candidacy of Col. Knox for President of the United States.

Elmer Cooper, Mokena precinct committeeman and Editor Wm. Semler were among those from Frankfort township who attended this gathering.

Hitch Hiker Found In Ditch

An unknown man hitch-hiker overcame by the cold and lack of food was found lying in a ditch alongside Keane avenue near Brennan's Gables Tuesday. Passing autoists reported seeing the man lying alongside the highway. Mr. Brennan assisted the man to his place and after giving him food and letting him get warmed up, he was turned over to the county police for aid.

NEW LENOX COUPLE WED 50 YEARS

For fifty years Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krohn, Sr., of New Lenox township have traveled life's path-way together and the golden anniversary of their marriage was observed Sunday at their home when relatives, friends and neighbors feted them.

An open house celebration was held between 2 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon and a buffet supper was served to relatives at six o'clock.

Mr. Krohn was born June 20, 1860 in Mackenbourg, Germany and immigrated to the United States in 1872. He came directly to Joliet where he received his education.

Mrs. Krohn was born in 1853 in Konigswald, Germany and came to this country in 1870.

Mr. and Mrs. Krohn were united in marriage December 17, 1885 at Mokena by Rev. C. Schaub, pastor of the St. John Evangelical church. Since their marriage the couple have resided in New Lenox township.

To this union six children were born, five of whom are living. They are: Henry, Edward and Rheinhardt of New Lenox. Mrs. Albert Steinberg of Manhattan and Mrs. Elmer Kohlman of Joliet. Also three children of Mrs. Krohn's former marriage, Mrs. Fred Schultz of Minneapolis, Minn., also John and Fred Messerknecht. There are also eight grand children and one great grandchild who were present to help celebrate the anniversary.

Brother of Mokena Woman Killed

Mrs. Robert Gaddis received the sad news last Thursday of the serious accident of her brother Edward Easton at his home in Rockford, Ill.

The young man was the eldest son of Byron Easton, Harlem township supervisor, operated his father's farm and at the time was working at the farm of a neighbor, Mr. Chas. Parker in Harlem shredding corn. He apparently slipped and fell into the corn shredder machine.

His left arm was torn off below the shoulder while his chest was mangled. Unable to extricate him without dismantling the shredder, fellow workers labored for an hour to free the injured youth from the machine. Finally his father was called and directed the operations which liberated the accident's victim. (Continued on Back Page)

Tinley Business Men To Stage Christmas Show

The Tinley Park Businessmen's regular week-end movie and vaudeville show indicates a record-breaker in attendance for this Saturday night, December 21.

The customary 5 acts of amateur vaudeville will be replaced by a beautiful pageant of pantomimes, presented by artistic talent, in accompaniment with music and singing which will depict the Christmas spirit.

Only through a great deal of effort and expense has it been possible to bring this presentation to the patrons of Tinley Park.

It is the earnest desire of the businessmen's association to produce a show for the Christmas holidays which will long be remembered.

The show will begin with the feature picture which will commence at 8:30 sharp. The picture will be that well known and heart throbbing drama called "Broken Dreams." From thence on, the evening will be occupied by the stage performance. The show will end with the Xmas spirit and all the trimmings.

What a Christmas party this is going to be. The demand for tickets in advance are already pouring in. It looks like a full house, so be sure and come early. The doors will be open at exactly 7:30 at the Tinley Park school auditorium.

The same low prices of admission will prevail. Everybody come and bring the children. It will be well worth your while.

NEW V. F. W. POST INSTALLATION IS HELD SUNDAY

The institution and installation of the New Lenox V. F. W. post and its officers took place with an inspiring ceremony at the Colonial Hall Sunday afternoon.

Carl Rosenbaum, Past Commander of Cantigny Post 367 of Joliet and Past Department Service Vice Commander, was the installing officer. Following an inspiring ceremony, the cross of Malta insignia was given to each member. The installing officer gave a brief review of the origin of the Cross of Malta during the Crusades.

Other V. F. W. officials assisting in the installation ceremonies were the following:

A. R. Kays, Department Jr., Vice-Commander F. E. Polly, Department Adjutant; Wm. Bollig, Past Council Administration Officer; and Past Commander Cantigny Post 367; Henry Schelling, Commander of Cantigny Post which Post supervised the installation.

Addresses were given by Com. Kays and Past Commander Carl Rosenbaum.

The big feature of the installation program was the stirring address by the popular National Judge Advocate General of the V. F. W., Henry Marquardt.

In his speech he pointed out how the V. F. W. has grown since its inception in 1899 until now it numbers over 250,000 members.

The vital part of his speech dealt with the movement by the V. F. W. for the immediate cash payment of the bonus in which he pointed out the good that would accrue to the nation as a whole if the bonus is paid now and the money placed in circulation.

Another very significant statement he made was that the V. F. W., is urging and fighting for the passage of the new neutrality bill which will come up before the next Congress in January. This bill would provide that the U. S. stay out of all foreign entanglements and thus the sons of the Veterans as well as all other young men of the nation will not be called upon to go through the war experiences the V. F. W. went through. Mr. Marquardt pointed out that most of the foreign wars are commercial wars. He declared further that the Standard Oil Co., and other big interests are always the first ones to ask the United States to send troops to foreign shores when these interests are endangered. Officers of the Wm. Martin V. F. W. Post and the Auxiliary of this Post were also present.

At the conclusion of the installation service, refreshments were served and the evening was given over to dancing.

The officers of the New Lenox Post are:

Commander, M. Korach.
Sen. Vice-Com., I. B. Stephens.
Jr. Vice Com. Joseph Shea.
Chaplain, Fred Scott.
Quartermaster, Geo. Todhunter.
Post Advocate, Glen Peterson.
Trustees, Ellis O'Daniel, Warren McIntyre, James Tauber.

The new post will undoubtedly be a big asset to New Lenox and will be able to accomplish much for its community.

The next meeting of the new post will be Friday night, December 20.

TINLEY HDW. DEALER FALLS DOWN SHAFT

Henry J. Bettenhausen, the well known Tinley Park Hardware man, was quite badly injured Tuesday evening when he fell down an elevator shaft in a factory building in Chicago.

He had visited the L. Gould Co., plant on Lake street to purchase additional toy supplies to the large stock of toys he already has at his store in Tinley Park. While walking down a hallway on the second floor some one called and for an instant he looked back but kept on walking and walked into an open elevator shaft. He dropped down 12 feet and in striking a concrete floor, broke the right arm in two places, sustained injuries to his head, side and ankle. He was knocked unconscious by the fall. Employees at the plant heard his shouts when he was falling and rushing to the lower floor found him lying at the bottom of the shaft. He was immediately rushed to a first-aid station a few blocks away for emergency treatment and was brought home Wednesday night.

A gate guarding the shaft had been carelessly left open by someone.

The many friends of Mr. Bettenhausen are very sorry to learn of his misfortune and wish him a timely recovery.

Mr. Bettenhausen has been a very busy man during this holiday season and this accident will compel him to be out of his store for sometime. He has a very efficient staff to carry on his business as usual.

Horse Killed When Struck By Automobile

While George Meyer residing southeast of Tinley Park near Coopers Grove was driving 5 horses along Cicero avenue while coming home from plowing a field about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, one of the horses got over too far on the pavement and was struck and instantly killed by an automobile driven by a veterinarian of Chicago. Two other horses were injured. Mr. Meyers fortunately escaped injury.

Blinding Snow Causes Triple Auto Wreck

During a blinding snow last Saturday night three automobiles figured in a wreck on 143rd street west of Orland Park. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hughes of Orland Park were driving west when a car from Joliet going east collided with their car head-on.

A nurse from Joliet and Herbert Lucas and Miss Gladys Townsend of Orland Park were in the Joliet car. The nurse was quite badly cut by broken glass, but the Orland couple escaped injury. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were both hurt, but not seriously.

A third car driven by a Chicago laundry owner crashed into the wrecked cars. The driver was not able to see the wrecked cars until he was close to stop. He was not hurt, but his car was quite badly damaged.

OLD MAID'S
TEA

By VIC YARDMAN

© Associated Newspapers.—WNU Service.

THE thermometer on the veranda of Moe Shipley's general store registered 114 when Sheriff Julian Lee dismounted and thumped up the steps. Inside, there was dark coolness. Sheriff Lee paused near the door, blinking his eyes to accustom them to the sudden change in light. Behind the counter, Moe looked up, recognized his visitor and smiled.

"Howdy, sheriff. Been expectin' yuh."

Sheriff Lee moved toward the voice. "Hello, Moe. Gimme a beer." He removed his sombrero and began mopping his brow with a checkered handkerchief.

Moe Shipley set out the beer and said, "Hull town's up in arms, Lee. They say Old Man Darrow's folks killed him for his money."

Lee sipped his beer and studied Moe's face.

The store owner and the officer were friends of long standing. They trusted and understood each other.

"Gimme the facts, Moe. What killed Darrow?"

"Poison. Or leas'twise, that's what the doc says. The doc's analyzed everything, and couldn't find a trace. That's why they notified you. If it was accidental, there'd be poison shown somewhere, the doc says."

"How many in the Darrow family?"

"Three, Darrow's second wife and her two sons. There's a heap of insurance, so I understand. Doc examined everything in the house, including their stock of household remedies, patent medicines, an' couldn't find a trace of poison."

Sheriff Lee finished his beer and paid for it. "Moe, I'll take a run out to Darrow's. You call Doc Adrian and tell him to meet me there."

Moe nodded and Sheriff Lee went out into the heat again. A dog ran out and barked at him, but he spoke to it quietly and it subsided. When he was half way up the walk the front door opened and a youth came out. He was a surly-faced youngster and there was hostility in his eyes.

Moe Did as Requested, and the Result Was a Pinkish Fluid.

"Less you got a warrant," said the youth, "you ain't a-comin' in here."

Sheriff Lee grinned pleasantly. "All right, sonny. Is your ma home?"

Before the youth could answer, the door opened a second time. A woman and a young man appeared.

Sheriff Lee guessed by their expressions that they resented his being there. He swept off his hat.

"Excuse me, ma'am. I don't aim to disturb yuh none. All I want is to ask a few questions."

"What kind of questions?"

The woman's voice was raspy, and when she spoke her expression became more hostile than ever.

"If it's about my husband, you're on the wrong trail. Folks around here ain't got the sense Gawd gave little apples. They're a-sayin' we killed Nate."

"An' they'll keep on sayin' it till we find out what killed your husband, ma'am, an' yuh better heed it. I'm the sheriff an' I gotta look into the business. Sensible thing for you to do is give me your co-operation."

The woman hesitated, staring uncertainly at the sheriff, unable to read his thoughts or suppress the suspicion in her own eyes.

While she waited the young man who stood on the porch beside her said: "Mebbe he's right, at that, ma. Leastwise, we ain't got nothin' to be skereed of."

"Which is right sensible talk," Sheriff Lee came up on the veranda. "Let's go inside, ma'am. It's hot here in the sun."

The woman hesitated again. Then she turned and led the way inside. Sheriff Lee followed, and behind him came the two young men. He smiled at them pleasantly, trying hard to break down the barrier of hostility.

"Your husband was an invalid, wasn't he, ma'am?"

"Yes, he was. An' he didn't have no bad habits. Doc Adrian spent two days prowlin' around the house lookin' for a bottle of poison an' didn't find none. An' if you think we killed Nate for his insurance money, you're crazy!"

"Ma'am, didn't your husband even imbibe an occasional drink of brandy? There's poor stuff bein' sold these days."

"He never touched nothin' stronger than old maid's tea."

"Old maid's tea?"

"Hot water and sugar. He drank a cupful before goin' to bed every night. Doc Adrian allowed it was good for him."

She shook her head as a sudden gleam lighted Lee's eyes.

"Nope, the water wasn't poisoned. That's the fust thing Doc Adrian tested."

"He tested the tea, did he?"

"Why, shucks, I just now said he tested the water, an' there ain't nothin' but water an' sugar in the tea."

"Ma'm, would you mind mixin' me up a cup o' that tea? It's a right hot day an' it sounds real coolin'."

The woman seemed to resent the request, but the older of the two youths moved off toward the kitchen. He returned a moment later bearing a cup which he handed to their visitor. Sheriff Lee took the cup and raised it to his lips. But he didn't drink. Instead, he stared at it and placed it back on the table.

"Ma'm, Doc Adrian's on his way up here. When he arrives, tell him to come down to Moe Shipley's store."

Without waiting for a reply, Sheriff Lee stood up and, bearing the cup of tea, headed for the door. Outside he found that Doc Adrian had already arrived, and he exchanged a few words with the medical man. Adrian nodded and continued on toward the house, while Sheriff Lee mounted and rode away.

Twenty minutes later Sheriff Lee entered Moe Shipley's store again.

"Hello, Moe, weigh me out two pounds of sugar."

Moe stared at him in astonishment. "Listen," he began, and then changed his mind. He went into a back room and Lee followed. From the depths of a barrel Moe scooped up some sugar and was about to weigh it, when Lee stopped him.

"Wait a minute, Moe. Here—" He reached for the dipper that hung above a water spigot, and filled it. "Dump some in here."

Moe did as requested, and the result was a pinkish fluid.

When the two men returned to the store's front room, Doc Adrian was there, and there was excitement in his eyes.

"Never mind, Doc. We know already. The sugar was poisoned by arsenic. Moe here had about fifty pounds wrapped in two-pound packages. He'd been keeping them on a shelf, and the other day he decided they weren't selling very fast, so he dumped 'em all into a barrel and offered it for sale in bulk instead. There was a package of rat poison on that shelf, too. Arsenic. It's dark here in the store, and when Moe dumped the packages of sugar into the barrel, he picked up the arsenic by mistake. Did you bring along what was left of the Darrows' sugar supply?"

"Yes, My analysis showed that it contained arsenic. Funny I never thought of that. How about other customers? Pretty careless of Moe, I should think."

"Fortunately, no one but the Darrows bought any sugar. Pretty careless of you, Doc, to go accusin' that Darrow woman of murder. You an' a few others better run out there and offer your apologies. Don't you worry about Moe. He's my business."

Sheriff Lee and Moe were friends of long standing. No one knew what was said between them that night. No one cared. Everyone makes mistakes—even to accusing a woman of murder, when no murder has been committed.

Difficult to Identify

Fish by Correct Names

You may think that you know your fishes but, according to the fish division of the Department of Conservation, there is considerable room for argument no matter what the fish you catch may look like to you. There are nearly as many different names for each kind of fish that is caught as there are species of fishes in many lakes and streams.

For instance, there is the "wall-eye" pike. On the Great Lakes he may be known as a pickerel, yellow pike or pike-perch, while in other localities he may be a river trout, jack pike, white-eye, jack salmon, blowfish or a blue pike.

The fish known as the small-mouth bass in Michigan is called a black perch in some localities and in other places a hogfish.

The large-mouth bass is known variously as a green bass, white bass, southern chub or yellow pond perch. Although when a Mississippi angler says that he caught a trout the chances are that this is just another name applied to the small-mouth bass of Michigan, the trout is generally called a trout wherever he is found. But the brook trout may also be a speckled or a mountain trout. The rainbow is frequently a coast range trout and a brown trout may be a Von Behr trout, German trout or a European brook trout, depending upon the locality in which it is taken.

Among the lake species which have many names are the sheephead, known also as the thunderpumper, bubbler or white perch; the bullhead which may be a miller's thumb, mufflejaw, spring-fish, or blob; and the burbot which is variously called lake lawyer, ling, elekey trout or long-tailed cat.—Detroit News.

Varnish Named for Queen

There's a curious beauty in varnish. It has something of the golden loveliness of the amber from which the ancients used to make it. When varnish is flowing from a brush onto your living room floor it will interest you to remember that it is named for Queen Berenice, who reigned in the Third century, B. C. When her husband, Ptolemy II, went off to war in Syria she cut off her magnificent golden hair as a sacrifice to Venus to insure his safe return. The ancients, because the lacquer they made with amber reminded them of the golden beauty of Berenice's hair, called it "bernix" or "vernix"—whence the Italian "vernice" and our English "varnish."

BREVITIES

Herman Larson of Moline died on his sixty-eighth birthday as a result of injuries received when he was struck by a hit-and-run autoist.

A mouse that sings like a canary was captured by Mr. and Mrs. Iva C. Blue of Rock Island and sent to the University of Iowa for study.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Wolstencroft, eighty-eight, died in her home in Moline. Born in England, Mrs. Wolstencroft resided in Moline for 67 years.

Archie C. Norton, for many years president of the Illinois State Normal Alumni association, died in Decatur. Mr. Norton was graduated from State Normal in 1899.

Stanley Markowski, thirty-eight years old, an alcohol peddler, was shot to death in Calumet City. His body, struck by six bullets, was found beside an auto parked at the curb.

Chester A. Bland, fifty-one years old, Wilmette, shot and killed himself in the Fox hotel of Elgin. A coroner's jury found that Bland committed suicide while despondent over financial difficulties.

Hugh McIlrath, Saline county farmer, was killed when Louie Conover, assistant cashier of a Harrisburg bank, with whom he was hunting, fired at a covey of quail, the shot striking McIlrath in the head.

Louis O. Eddy, sixty-three, president and general manager of the Wakefield Medicine company for many years and active in many social and civic undertakings, died in a Bloomington hospital.

Officials of the American Steel and Wire company announced plans to construct two new rod mills in Joliet, with an annual joint capacity of 220,000 gross tons. Fred Ingraham, district manager, said construction would start in 60 days, at a cost of $3,000,000.

Ronald E. Rambo and James Jarrett, both fifteen, were held to the Madison county grand jury in Edwardsville after statements of five witnesses testifying before a coroner's jury in the death of John C. Higgins, former deputy treasurer, who was shot to death.

Motorists chuckled at the sight of bright red patches on the seats of the troupers of state engineers who were making a survey of the Batavia-Aurora link of Lincoln highway along the east brink of the Fox river. "I don't know whose idea it is, but it's a good one," said C. H. Appel, chief of the divisional highway offices in Elgin, who was bossing the job. "Those fellows don't want to take any more chances than they have to on rear end collisions."

Stricter enforcement of the law requiring automobile owners to have their new license plates January 1 is contemplated, state officials announced as counter sales of the plates started. There are no days of grace under the law. Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes pointed out, and the plates are placed on sale earlier this year to permit car owners plenty of time to obtain them. The new plates have white numbers with a black background and are the same size as the 1935 plates.

William Ganschaw, age sixty-five, "mercy slayer," apparently fulfilled his part of a six-months-old suicide pact by leaping to his death from the gallery of a cellhouse in State prison. He died soon afterward in a hospital. Ganschaw was sentenced to 14 years on a charge of murdering his wife Elizabeth, age fifty-eight, whom he described as incurably ill. She was found dead from gas. Ganschaw said he intended to die with her, but after lying in a gas-filled room for 15 minutes, got up and called the fire department.

Collections under the 3 per cent sales tax law totaled $5,403,952 during November, an increase of $250,171 over the previous month, K. L. Ames, state director of finance, announced. The November collection is the largest so far since the 3 per cent levy went into effect July 1. One-third, or $1,801,317 will be used for relief, about $1,083,000 for the schools throughout the state, and the balance for relief of the blind, the University of Illinois, sinking funds for soldiers' compensation, the waterway bonds, and the general revenue fund.

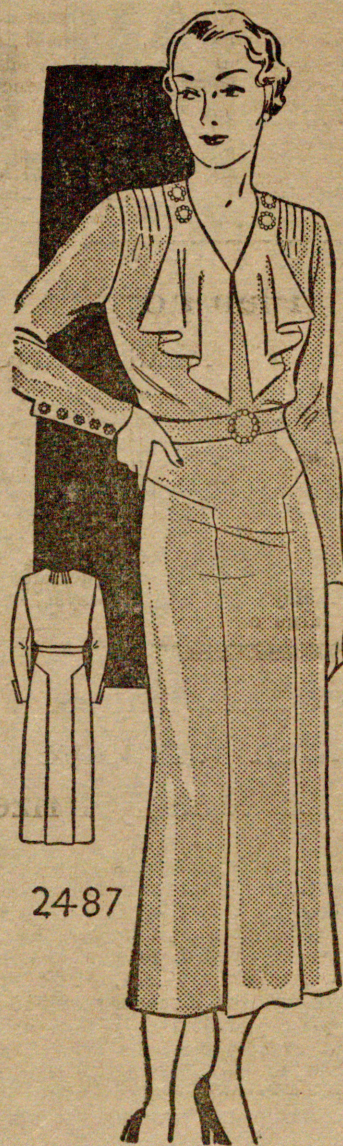

A charge that Lew A. Hendee, former county clerk of Lake county, collected $38,000 in "fees, gifts, and bonuses" from operating a marriage mill at Waukegan during the eleven months when he held the office "illegally" was made by Russ Alford, present county clerk, in filing a suit for $50,000 damages against Hendee. The bill was filed by Attorney J. E. Bairstow in the Lake County Circuit court at Waukegan. Alford, a Democrat, defeated Hendee, a Republican, in the election of November, 1934. Hendee continued to hold office on the basis of a canvass by the election board which declared him the winner. Alford took his case to the courts and, after being sustained by the Illinois Supreme court in a mandamus action, took over the clerk's office last month.

Mrs. Laura Whiteside Hunt, eighty-two, oldest native resident of Port Byron, died there. She was a niece of Archie Allen, first rural mail carrier in that part of the state.

The Illinois commerce commission obtained the first conviction under the new state warehouse law, enacted July 1, which requires warehouse owners to purchase a $50 state license and post a $5,000 bond. William R. Miller, owner of the ABC warehouse in Chicago, pleaded guilty and was fined $100 by Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland. Unable to pay the fine, Miller was committed to the Bridewell.

A Frock With Slender Lines for Matron Who Wears Size Forty-Six

PATTERN 2487

2487

Here's a real "find" for the woman who's a size forty-six, and has been seeking a dressy frock that will ably conceal extra pounds, yet allow her to look as young as she feels. Then, too, there's also a wealth of slenderness to be gained by center panels, front and back, which hold a wide box pleat in seam. Deserving of the title "bosom friend" is that dressy, graceful twin jabot that so successfully conceals too ample curves. The matron will do well to choose a smooth, sleek silk, satin, or crepe for her "very best" frock, let the jabot contrast, and bright buttons do a little "highlighting."

Pattern 2487 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 39 inch fabric and ¾ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 243 West Seventeenth St., New York City.

Why Vote?

At Greenville, Ind., Farnsley Burkhardt, Democrat, won the clerk-treasurehip of the town by outguessing Republican Clarence Homburger. Burkhardt guessed the date on a penny was 1918; the other party to the tie vote said 1926. The date was 1919.

Grandmother Believes Health and Wealth Responsibilities

Asserting that their grandmother is "old-fashioned and ignorant of modern methods of life," the two grandchildren of a famous financier publicly asked for her removal as their guardian.

The shortcomings of which these children of sixteen and seventeen complain on the part of their grandmother are not with reference to knowledge of financial affairs.

It is not her faults as an investor of which they complain in asking to have her removed as their guardian. No. The matters in which she is "too old-fashioned" doubtless come closer—in their opinion—than that!

Probably she is old-fashioned in such annoying matters as health. At her age she may be foolish enough to imagine that at sixteen and seventeen one is still growing mentally and physically, and that wholesome living is of paramount importance. Probably she cannot see the benefit of burning the candle at both ends. Faced with a choice between dancing and sleep, she is probably unreasonable enough on occasions to rule out the dancing.

And perhaps she is old-fashioned in money matters. Having been accustomed to wealth long enough to have a true sense of values, she probably objects to extravagance. Too old to see clearly, she probably feels that merely having money is no reason for dissipating it. Indeed she may even feel the possession of wealth as a responsibility, and try to train her grandchildren to self-respecting handling of it from that point of view.

Being old-fashioned, she may feel, too, that having money is not enough to bring one complete satisfaction in life. She may be urging them to sow the seeds of future usefulness—and therefore content and happiness—in study and serious thought about taking their place in the world as the grandchildren of a man who from humble beginnings became the ruler of millions. That, of course, would seriously interfere with their preoccupation of having a good time.

Yes, the grandmother is doubtless old-fashioned in all of those ways. And they are ways which can be very annoying when one is sixteen or seventeen with plenty of money and no dearth of people who are quite willing to let one be one's own master.

Child Will Read Story
That He Thinks Is Good

"Who shall define interest for another person, compounded as it is of the raw material of which personality is made?" queries a writer in the Parents' Magazine, declaring that there is apt to be one of two reasons why a child does not like to read. Either he has not mastered the technique of reading to an extent where no voluntary effort must be exerted or else he has not had access in sufficient numbers to books which correspond to his idea of a good story.

"Your child will read if he but discovers the books particularly right for his interests and tastes," declares the writer whose experiences with children and books has convinced her that there does not live the youngster who will not listen to a good story, and since reading is only a method of listening to a good story, will not read if the book is about something in which he is either actually or potentially interested; is written in words and style suitable to his reading ability; has the degree of advancement suitable to both his emotional and intellectual age levels. Those two developments, by the way, are at entirely different rates of speed. As the writer adroitly puts it: "Children do the strangest juggling and somersaulting as regards these ages, going into a hand-spring a poised adolescent, coming up at the end, an emotional eight-year-old."

Rock "Forest" in Andes

In the Andean mountains of Peru, at an elevation of 14,000 feet, is to be found a rock "forest" dating back to antediluvian days. Marine shells are scattered on the ground, and at one edge of the area is a mountain of pure rock salt. Once this area was the basin of an inland sea.—Nature Magazine.

Cheers for Calumet's New 10¢ Can—and perfect, never-fail baking!

"I never have baking troubles with Calumet—and I save, too!" says Mrs. Jack Caskey, 880 Avalon St., Memphis, Tenn.

"Your new 10¢ can makes me feel very thrifty!" says Mrs. Nancy E. Williams, 499 Moreland Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

"It's real quality at a saving!" says Mrs. K. J. Tobin, of Beverly Hills, Ill. "I've never had a baking failure with Calumet."

Why does Calumet give such "luck"? Why is it different from other baking powders?

Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick one for the mixing bowl—a slower one for the oven. This Double-Action is so perfectly balanced and controlled that it produces perfect leavening. Calumet is a product of General Foods.

A SIMPLE TWIST... and the Easy-Opening Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken finger-nails!

All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history... The regular price of the Full-Pound Can is now only 25¢! And ask to see the new, big 10¢ can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—A politician without a problem confronting him is virtually unknown. Whether he be a big shot in political life or just a ward heeler, his life is constantly beset with difficulties. Those difficulties always have and always will force him to wiggle and squirm and sprout additional gray hairs.

Political Problems

The newest problem worrying politicians is the Townsend old age pension proposal. Promoters of that fantastic scheme are gaining such a headway that even James A. Farley, postmaster general, chairman of the Democratic national committee and chairman of the New York state Democratic committee, is currently reported to be developing frowns on his otherwise smiling face. When Mr. Farley begins to get worried, there is cause, indeed, for all of the other politicians, big and little, to get worried. The Republicans also are concerned about the Townsend plan. But it is not quite as important to the Democrats as it is to the Democrats to take a stand on the Townsend plan because the Democrats are in control of the national administration and obviously they are on the defensive.

The battle being pressed by Mr. Townsend and his satellites is no small concern. Impossible as it is of operation; doomed to ultimate failure as such a scheme must definitely be, it continues to expand in its scope of political influence and has arrived at the point where it constitutes a power that must be reckoned with by all. I am convinced that anyone who will analyze the Townsend plan cannot help arriving at the conclusion that it is comparable to the fantasy of the "Mississippi bubble." When the Mississippi bubble broke, not thousands but millions were disillusioned, if not utterly destroyed, and their economic future, so glowingly painted, was completely wrecked.

The Townsend plan which contemplates payment of two hundred dollars per month to the indigent is one of those things that develops invariably in periods of economic distress. It is distinctly a product of hard times.

When people are out of work and without resources; when they are suffering, they are always prey to any and all argument offering them relief. The conditions exact even a greater toll, a toll leading to crime. Only a few days ago the chief of the secret service, W. H. Moran, told me that it was a characteristic of hard times that counterfeiters of currency were more active. Idle hands will find something to do and the clever crook will take advantage of the situation. While every one who has talked with Doctor Townsend recognizes his sincerity, his earnest desire to accomplish relief for the aged and indigent population, I believe it is an indisputable fact that Doctor Townsend's plan would not get to first base except for the fact that this country now has millions of citizens who are almost if not quite without food.

The point I am trying to make is that Doctor Townsend's scheme, idle dream that it is, has been put forward at one of the few times in this nation's history when it is possible to amass a following of political importance. It is only in times such as these that people would pay attention to it. It will die down and his organization will crumble sometime in the future but this will not happen until it has caused plenty of grief, until it has wrecked political fortunes of countless scores of men and women who guess wrong and until probably it has produced a burden of taxation upon this nation the like of which never has been seen before.

In the forthcoming campaign, I believe we will see numerous political candidates, otherwise sound in their thinking, affirm the validity of the Townsend plan. They will commit themselves to its support because political maneuvers will force them into that position. Some of them, probably more than we now imagine, will be elected to congress and they will bring a gigantic headache to Uncle Sam who must foot the bill. Townsend plan supporters in all of their preachments have consistently talked of their proposition from its beautiful side. It is susceptible of that because it is easy to point out what a blessing it would be to have each aged person receive a monthly check of two hundred dollars from the government.

But there is another side to the picture. It is basic. Where will the government get the money? Townsend spokesmen have figured out a visionary taxation scheme to raise the amount of money required but the thing they do not discuss is the fundamental fact that by their taxation scheme they will depreciate our national currency and will load upon those who are willing to work such a burden of taxation that soon there will be a clamor from three out of four of the population for some kind of a government payment. The end then would be obvious because after all government as such produces nothing. All that it pays out must be taken from those who produce.

Another Problem

In advertising to the Townsend plan as I have done, I have attempted to set forth in a manner what I believe to be one of the greatest dangers of the present day, namely, the absence of clear thinking. In the Townsend plan, as in many other problems that confront the nation at the moment, individuals seem prone to jump at conclusions without analyzing what conditions actually are and without considering what the ultimate effect would be. It seems worth while to consider another national problem which, though of an economic nature and less sensational in its outward appearance, is nevertheless very real. This problem concerns our transportation system.

Shortly after President Roosevelt took office we were deluged with argument that amounted to propaganda favoring government ownership of the railroads. There was a reaction against this idea. The reaction was so strong that few politicians dared to unloose their demagoguery in favor of government ownership. Yet, it is perfectly evident that those who favor perpetuating private enterprise which is always more efficient and less wasteful than any government are in danger of being lulled to sleep. Crack pots and misguided theorists in great numbers still favor government ownership of the railroads. They are still working. The government ownership problem is not dead. It is only concealed from the eyes of most of us for the time being.

Certain developments of the past several months confirm the statement I have just made. Taken singly, these developments appear insignificant. Collectively, they are very important. I have heard it charged that government ownership advocates have a well-laid plan to wreck private ownership in the rail industry. This charge goes further. It asserts that those who seek to destroy our profit system are proceeding, piecemeal, to load a burden of charges upon the railroads so that in the end it will be a physical impossibility for the railroad corporations to earn a profit. Indeed, it is alleged that the scheme contemplates eventual burdening of the rail lines to the extent where they cannot make their expenses.

Obviously, if that end were attained, bankruptcy would follow. Then, there would be no alternative but legislative action placing the railroads in government ownership. Our wartime experience ought to be sufficient to demonstrate how the costs mount when the government operates the railroads. It means more taxes on every one of us who has income whether it be large or small.

But to get back to the developments mentioned earlier. Whether there exists an actual plan to drive the railroads into bankruptcy or not, the developments certainly are subject to that surmise. One of the items of expense, a new burden of cost that is proposed to be loaded on the railroads, is the rail pension law. I have seen some statistical calculations which were convincing to me at least that the charges proposed to be levied upon the railroads by the law will not work out in the manner their proponents claim. The bill would assess each rail corporation 3½ per cent of its payroll and each worker would contribute a proportionate amount of his salary toward his pension when he retires. Like the Townsend plan, no one can argue against the fine spirit actuating a move to protect the retired workers. But to go behind the figures at the start one finds certain astonishing facts. Almost any way, almost any method, one uses to calculate this cost, forces the conclusion that after eight or ten years the pension system will have expanded to such an extent that the railroads will be carrying an annual charge on their payroll of not 3½ per cent but approximately 15 per cent. I think it goes without saying that no industry can bear such a tax.

In addition to the pension proposition, labor unions, aided by their cat-paws in congress have kept up a steady machine gun fire, demanding first one thing and then another from the carriers. For instance, one of the current demands—and it is likely to succeed in some form—is the movement for shorter hours for practically the entire list of railroad employees. Of course, the railroads cannot justify working their employees longer than eight hours except in an emergency. It is possible that a seven-hour day might be practiced. But even a seven-hour day would mean that the railroads must add to their operating costs, and any item added to operating costs reduces the chance of the corporations for an even break between income and outgo.

There are a number of other such demands or movements under way or in the offing. Each one means a new burden, a new tax on the railroads.

TINLEY PARK

The Tinley Park Post Office will remain open for a few hours Christmas morning. No mail will be received or sent however. There will be no rural delivery.

Miss Jessie Wilke who underwent an operation in the Blue Island hospital last week, returned home Monday. She is convalescing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wyman who have been ill with colds but who seemed to be improving, have been confined to their homes with a recurrence of colds.

The Tinley Park Business Men's Association met in the Tinley Park school Tuesday evening.

The Tinley Park Legion Post held their regular meeting Tuesday night. Refreshments were served following the meeting.

Mrs. John Schultdt, Jr., who has been a patient in the Blue Island hospital is now at the home of her son in Blue Island and is improving.

Assessor Charles F. Nielson is sending out personal property tax schedules this week. All those on state, county, American Legion Relief, P. W. A., or out of work are required to show this information on the tax schedule.

The local elevator has been kept busy with the delivery of new corn this week.

The buncos party held at the Studio Bazaar in the Schreiber building Wednesday afternoon was well attended.

Surveyors have been in town the past week surveying for the grading and resurfacing of the highway running east of Tinley Park parallel to the Rock Island railroad to Oak Forest. The project is a PWA one and a force of men will be put to work on it very soon. The top of the road will be of macadam, but this work will not be done until spring, but all the grading and drainage work will be done during the winter months. This road is used considerably and its improvement will be much appreciated by the traveling public.

Mrs. Omar Ebenhack underwent a major operation in the St. Luke's hospital, Chicago, last Thursday, and is expected home this week-end.

T Y O TATTLER

Folks, have you heard about the swell Radio the T Y O is going to award some lucky person at the school auditorium on Saturday night December 28. See one of the T Y O members for further particulars. The regular basketball season will begin on Friday, January 3. More about this game will be in next week's column.

What's this about Mooie calling up two other members of the club to come over to his house and play "Cops and Robbers." And was "Maggie" his new flame sore when he forgot to call her up. It must be love!

Howie's date with a girl from Homewood last Sunday seemed to have had results. He sure must have been in a sweat over her, 'cause he's home with a bad cold.

It seems as though Fulton and his one-and-only from Roseland have just about reached the parting of the way. We herewith offer him our sympathy.

The gang went to a show last Sunday night in the city and almost landed out on their ears when one of the patrons of the theatre proved to be too tough for Eddie.

Now that "Ginger's" back in town our "Clark Gable" Siemsen just can't get home from work fast enough. We would also like to know what happened to all the candy "Siemie" won. Guess we'll have to send "Cops and Robbers" Klepper to trail him.

We still haven't found out who Vogt took to the dance at the Shoreland hotel. Another job for "Cops" Klepper.

Our ex-Michigan scholar seems to just about live over at his girl-friends house. We'd like to know if he sleeps over there yet. Guess that's another job for "Cops" Klepper.

Haney, what happened between you and another girl in this town a few days ago. This is another job for "Cops" Klepper.

Reed seems to have made up with "Cass" again. Was it because Xmas is coming? Get on the job "Cops."

Well don't forget about the swell radio to be awarded Saturday night, December 28.

THE "3" PEEPERS!

Frankfort

New Lenox

4-H Club News

The monthly meeting of the Frankfort-New Lenox 4-H club was held Wednesday, December 11, at the Eisenbrandt home. Louis Ebert made a report on the National Livestock Exposition. Fred Francis Jr. then made a report on the National Club Congress which he attended for one week. All his expenses were paid to this Congress by the Farm Bureau. He also received a prize and a Wilson award, and besides being a National Champion he was a State, County and Club champion. It is the goal of every 4-H member to be a member of the National Club Congress. Forty-four states were represented at this congress and everyone had the best time in their lives. Three members of our club also received prizes at the National Livestock show. They are: Charles Francis, 2nd and 14th; Lewis Ebert, 4th and Fred Francis Jr. 11th.

The Honor Roll banquet will be held December 30, at 6 p. m. at the Wilmington M. E. church. The tickets for those eligible to go are 50c.

The meeting was adjourned, games were played and refreshments were served.

The next meeting will be held January 8, at the home of Edward and Wilbert Lauffer.

Did you buy bonds in the big war excitement, when little ladies, seated on elephants, sang patriotic songs and begged you to give "till it hurts"?

One hundred and eighty-five million dollars' worth of government bonds are mislaid somewhere, perhaps hidden in old trunks, in desks, safe-deposit boxes, by those now dead. The government would like to get these past-due bonds and pay for them.

On the edge of the Sacramento river in California, a lady, thirty years old, appeared with a suitcase. While eight youths looked on, she undressed, then danced for some time on the edge of the water, finally plunged in, crying, "I'm not coming back," and sank in midstream. That death-preceding dance is new in suicide.

One out of every three married couples in the United States is childless, news not complimentary to the childless families. Exceptions are cases in which nature refuses to send children.

You would not value a chain of steel with every third link broken, or a chain of heredity with every third link missing. This "childless family" news should make this country revise stupid laws against immigration, shutting out men and women willing to have children, and work for them.

LINCOLN ESTATES

Wilfred Niedringhaus

Mrs. J. Roberts spent Friday and Wednesday in Chicago.

Mrs. J. McGrath who is an instructor in the Nina Parker Beauty College in Chicago enjoyed a week's vacation here. She lives at the Elms Hotel in Chicago.

Billy Lockwood of Chicago is a visitor in the Lockwood home.

Mrs. Wm. Lockwood spent a few days this week in Chicago.

Mrs. Berna Summers of Mt. Vernon, Ill., is visiting with her sister, Mrs. A. C. Becker. They all spent Sunday with Mr. Becker's mother in Chicago.

The Wm. Martin Post V. F. W. were well represented Sunday at the instituting of the New Lenox Post No. 3419 at New Lenox Sunday afternoon. All had a nice time.

The P. T. A. of the Ann Rutledge school will give a Christmas party for the children of that school district in the school Monday Dec. 23 at 1:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Otto Niedringhaus spent Wednesday in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Niedringhaus of Chicago visited in the Otto Niedringhaus home Monday.

Dividends

To Be Paid

Edward J. Barrett, State Auditor, today announced that he has authorized payment of a 10 per cent dividend, amounting to $7,262.25, to the depositors of the Farmers State Bank of Crete, Crete, Ill. This is the first dividend to be paid since the bank closed. The checks will be mailed out December 17th.

In addition to this dividend, $947.27 has been paid to preferred creditors and $3,000.00 has been paid on bills payable.

This dividend is being paid out of funds acquired in the ordinary course of liquidation.

William L. O'Connell is Receiver for the bank.

Edward J. Barrett, State Auditor, announced today that he has authorized payment of 10 per cent, amounting to $8,610.75 on the waived deposits at the Plainfield State Bank. Following the banking moratorium in 1933, the depositors at this bank waived 50 per cent of their deposits in order to facilitate opening of the bank. This disbursement, which is the third payment, will be made this week.

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. Monica who have been living on Wolf Road is moving to a place at 183rd and Cicero Ave.

Miss Christina Schmidt who has been absent from her duties at the local telephone office because of illness is improving.

"By the People"— Or by Politicians?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

During recent weeks America has heard a swelling volume of protest against interference by numerous political Boards, Bureaus and Commissions with the lives and affairs of citizens.

The protest comes from various sources—from merchants, in communities both large and small; from many growers and consumers of our food products; from increasing numbers of men and women in the professions and in business.

What is the explanation?

One answer might be that such interference can seriously affect the citizen's means of earning a livelihood. But many keen observers of the current American scene suggest a deeper and more fundamental motive.

The protests, they believe, reflect a surge of resentment against usurpation by political jobholders of powers which American citizens are convinced belong only to officials chosen by the people.

They represent, in other words, a spreading antagonism to Bureaucracy which after expanding swiftly during several decades has achieved an unprecedented growth and power during the past few years.

When one considers the many powers now assumed by the hundreds of Boards, Bureaus and Commissions which crowd the office buildings of Washington, the protests seem more than justified. That such usurpation of authority constitutes an abridgment of the political power of the people is equally obvious.

Under our Constitution the people delegate to Congress—not to appointed Bureaus—the right to make our laws. Under it we delegate to the Executive Branch of Government—not to appointed Bureaucrats—the power to enforce those laws.

When these powers are usurped by jobholders in whose selection we have no choice and over whose activities we exercise no control, then "Government by the People" becomes an empty phrase.

In its place we get Government by Bureaucrats—which means not only waste of the people's money in unnecessary public payrolls and public expenditures, but a frank surrender of the people's right to govern themselves.

FRANKFORT

Stanley Warning

Mrs. Edward Warning returned Sunday from Silver Cross hospital and is doing nicely.

Mrs. Fred Warning entertained the 500 club of Mokena in her home last Wednesday afternoon.

The M. E. Ladies Aid sponsored a Christmas party last Thursday. A pot-luck dinner was served. After the business meeting a short play was given by Mesdames, Mable Heisner, Irma Hedges, Matilda Tewes, Edith Carlson and Frankie Tinker.

Paul Lambrecht son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lambrecht was ill last week with a touch of pneumonia. He is improving nicely now.

A community Christmas tree was erected Saturday by the Frankfort Business men in the vacant lot east of the Scheer and Stellwagen store. That evening, a short program was given by the Frankfort band and school children.

An Appeal To Reason

When the National Congress convenes in January, it is pledged to the early consideration of one of the most controversial questions ever to attract widespread public attention. That question concerns the immediate cash payment of World War Veterans adjusted service certificates—commonly known as the "bonus".

There are approximately three and one half million veterans who hold adjusted service (bonus) certificates. Each certificate has an average value of $500.

Immediate cash payment of the World War bonus will mean the distribution of approximately $2,000,000,000 in cash to veterans in every section of the country.

This debt has been acknowledged by the Federal Government. The obligation is already a part of our national debt. It must be paid in 1945, if not before that time.

Here is something to think about. The payment of this money to World War veterans offers Uncle Sam the one and only available method of increasing the purchasing power of the people in a way that will simultaneously reduce the national debt.

Today the U. S. government is spending billions of dollars in the attempt to prime the pump of prosperity. Unfortunately, every penny being spent in this fashion simply boosts the national debt and adds to your future burden of taxation.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States in demanding of the national congress the immediate cash payment of World War Veterans adjusted service certificates, is offering an ideal substitute for relief which will ease the load of federal, state and local charity burdens to a substantial degree. In this state alone the payment of this debt will divide the sum of 141,472,289.16 among 253,343 World War Veterans. Immediate cash payment of the so-called bonus will accomplish four big objectives:

1. It will reduce the national debt by approximately $2,000,000,000.

2. It will place every penny of approximately $2,000,000,000 in the hands of about three and one-half million veterans.

3. It will provide these veterans with adequate purchasing power to provide for the needs of nearly fifteen million individuals—members of their families and dependants.

4. It will reduce the demands on local and federal relief agencies by providing unemployed and needy veterans with funds, by stimulating every line of business and by automatically reducing unemployment.

This is one appropriation that Congress can make without at least sixty cents out of every $1.00 falling into the hands of politicians and patronage seekers. Benefits will not be confined to one or two industries. Every penny of this bonus money will go directly to the veteran with a subsequent benefit to every phase of trade and commerce.

The bonus question is one that concerns every business man. Common sense tells us these veterans, and their families, will neither eat nor hoard this money. They will spend it for food, clothing, medicine, furniture, taxes, amusement and every commodity included in the necessities of every day living. Veterans will only be temporary custodians of a sum of approximately two billion dollars that is destined to find its way into the cash registers of every business firm.

Support of the campaign of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States for immediate cash payment of Adjusted Service Certificates is a patriotic obligation you owe to the veterans in your community. At the same time, your support of this campaign is something you owe to yourself and all the people in your community. The nation as a whole will benefit because this reduction in the national debt will enhance the prospect of reduced taxation.

Here is what you can do to help. Write a letter to your Representative and Senators in the United States Congress. Tell them why you favor immediate cash payment of Adjusted Service Certificates. Promise your support at the polls to those members of Congress who are willing to quit playing politics with this important issue by pledging their support of pending legislation. Urge the members of your family, your business associates and your friends to do likewise. Persuade the business groups with which you are affiliated to take similar action.

This fight is your fight—as well as the veterans'. Enlist today in defense of a cause that will do more for economic recovery in the U. S. A., than all the reckless spending and boondoggling political master minds have ever been able to conceive.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie. Garth experiences difficulties in getting his companions into line. An experience with a bear helps.

CHAPTER V—Continued

Garth laid down his rifle and came forward. He ignored the wary hostile look of the mining engineer, nodded to Mr. Ramill, and took off his battered hat to bend low before Miss Ramill in a polite bow.

"You are too kind, my dear lady. I could not deprive any of you of your sweets. 'Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow—' You may recall the rest of the quotation."

Mr. Ramill went red. What if Lilith did happen to find these things you were hogging for private use? We need them as much as you."

"Far more so," Garth amended the statement. "I don't need them at all. Go right ahead and waste what's left. You of course are certain there'll be no emergencies on the way out—no occasions when a pinch of tea or sugar may make the difference between life and death for you."

"How frightful," said Huxby. "Quite so. While you're about it, you may as well make a clean sweep. Here," Garth tossed the gold-mounted cigar case to his own ear.

"Oh, so that's how Dad lost his smokes," exclaimed Miss Ramill. "Who's the real sneak around here? Steal all those cigars, and the gold case, too. Then come whining because we've kept you from cheating us out of our share of these things you hid. Hand over the cigars, Dad. My throat's still rasped from the vile smoke of that willow bark Vivian dried for our cigarettes."

Ramill handed the case back to Garth.

"Wa-wait!" cried his daughter. He waved her away. "No. The joke is on us. He knows what is ahead. We do not. We've emptied the sugarbowl and half the teabag. Tie up that bag and the salt, Vivian, and hand them to him."

Garth shook his head, and bowed to the angry-eyed girl.

"Thank you, no. Miss Ramill has taken charge. As I recall my Anglo-Saxon, 'lady' originally meant bread-cutter. She was the one who rationed out the food. I figure upon at least five weeks before we reach the Mackenzie. Miss Ramill will keep charge of the salt and tea—do with them whatever she thinks best."

She flared. "I will not! I'll do no such thing."

"As you please. It's a matter of utter indifference to me. More than once I've gone for two months on meat alone. You're quite welcome to throw these pouches into the fire."

He glanced around, taking stock of the camp.

"Everything in keeping, I see. No sewing done on the moccasins, muffle all eaten, woodpile nearly used up. You'd better cook and eat all the meat you can before the rest of the wood is burnt. When the fire goes out, we'll have plenty of four-footed visitors to relieve us of those mouse legs—wolves, foxes, wolverines. Also ravens and moosebirds. Even Mamma Grizzly and her children may turn up."

There followed a silence, broken at last by Miss Ramill. She repeated her first question, but in a very different tone: "Mr. Garth, may I pour you a cup of the tea?"

"Thank you, I do not need it. The rest of you will, I suggest keeping it for breakfast. You'll have no other taste of sweets for over a month, unless we find a bumblebee nest."

The girl silently covered the top of the pot with the inverted tin cup. Her father heaved up his soft bulk. He beckoned to Huxby.

"Come, Vivian. The agreement was that Garth should be skipper. That wood pile will not last another hour. We can't permit any bear raids on our bull market."

The engineer met the quip with a rather thin smile. However, he set about gathering firewood with quickness and efficiency.

Garth lifted one of the moose quarters from the smoke rack and began to cut off large thin slices. These he laid on the poles for quicker smoke curing and drying. He paid no attention to Miss Ramill.

When the girl saw he did not intend to speak to her, she picked up the salt and tea pouches and went into the leanto. Garth thought she meant to go to bed. Instead, she crawled out again, put one of the freshly cut slices of meat on a willow spit, and held it over the end of the fire where the muffle had simmered.

As soon as the steak was broiled, the cook sullenly offered it to Garth. He took it with no betrayal of his surprise, and sat down to eat. "Thank you, sister."

She frowned. "I never hated anyone so much in all my life as I hate you. But that was a mean trick, stealing your sugar."

"All the more reason for you to hate me. Not that it matters a penny—the sugar or your hate. I'll admit, though, it's very interesting to watch the reactions of yourself and your father. Huxby is just a commonplace wolf. But your father and you—the lady of leisure and the millionaire acquirer—tossed from the lap of luxury into the raw wild. You'll have to acknowledge it's high comedy."

"If it is, then you're the clown," was the best she could counter.

He agreed: "That's it, the jester—the fool of the play—the loon who was to have been gulled and bilked. Who knows? He may be yet. But he will have had the fun of the game."

Miss Ramill turned her back on him and went to crawl into the leanto. Her father and Huxby came with still more wood to pile on the already high heap of fuel. The engineer went to lie down at his sleeping place on the lee side of the fire. During the day he had gathered a much thicker bed of spruce tips and dry moss.

The long hours of twilight slowly faded to the semi-dusk of midnight and as slowly brightened towards full day. Sunrise found the three visitors from the cities still asleep. Along with the tea and sugar, they had gorged on the muffle gelatine and the tender lynx meat. Garth did not waken them. He looked speculatively at the smoke rack. All the lynx meat had been eaten. But the wide spread of moose hindquarter slices made a great showing around the two uncut moose forelegs. He decided to let the tongues and the remaining muffle keep on smoke curing.

"You Are Too Kind, My Dear Lady. I Could Not Deprive Any of You of Your Sweets."

Two hours or so later the crack of moose bones under the blows of the belt-ax awakened Huxby. He sat up to turn hungrily in the direction from which came a savory odor. Garth had drawn a thigh bone from the fire and was buttering a piece of broiled meat with hot marrow.

The engineer came around and laid one of the thigh bones on the fire. Above it he slanted a steak on a spit. Neither he nor Garth spoke. He started to eat his steak and marrow before either was more than half cooked.

Garth finished his own breakfast and began to sew a moccasin. As soon as Huxby had bolted down his food, he picked up the emptied gold pan. Miss Ramill had sat up in the front of the leanto to lace her boots. Her father crept out past her.

"Morning, Vivian," he greeted. "I see you're going to set the pan on the fire again. Good idea. That muffle aspic is all Garth told us it would be."

"No," Huxby's tone was almost curt. "We've lost too much time already. I am going to make a complete test of that placer deposit."

He looked with cold wariness at the rightful claimant of the placer. Garth smiled. "Go to it. The more you pan out, the more of my 60 per cent I'll be able to jingle in my pocket."

That sent the engineer off with a crease between his hard eyes. Mr. Ramill studied Garth's amused face.

"What is the idea?" he inquired. "Do we infer you still stand by the terms you offered?"

"Well, I may at least allow you four-tenths of what your Man Friday sweats out of my placer. The laborer is worthy of his hire—I'm going for a dip. You and Miss Ramill might get your moose bones to roasting. The marrow goes well with the steaks. Let me suggest that you build a large fire in the regular cook hole. When it burns low, rake out the coals and lay in one of the forelegs, thickly smeared with mud. Then rake on dirt, embers and ashes, build a small fire on top, and keep it going four or five hours."

Miss Ramill looked down at her slender hands. They were already roughened and grimed, and two of the highly manicured nails had been broken. The large diamond of her engagement ring flashed blue-white fire up into her angrily flashing blue eyes. She jerked her head up to glare out at Garth. He was already disappearing in the brush on his way to the rock pool.

When he returned from his plunge, a fire was flaming high in the cook hole. Well away from it, the heiress to millions was smearing one of the moose legs with mud brought up from the lake shore by her father in his expensive soft hat.

Garth raked the thigh bones from the smudge-fire and set back the spits of the partly burnt steaks. He then dripped melting moose fat into a small twist-cut of birch bark that he had brought back with him. The cup already held two or three gills of spruce pitch.

The mud-daubers washed their hands in the rill and came for their overcooked breakfast. While Mr. Ramill cracked open the marrow bones with the belt-ax, Garth stirred his dope together with a twig. He took off his hat before starting to smear the dope on his face. Miss Ramill gazed at him.

Garth offered his dope. "Best cosmetic in the North. You may as well go the limit."

"I'll die first!"

Her father dipped his fingers in the dope and smeared the stuff on his face and neck as Garth had done.

Garth said: "Eat your fill. Miss Ramill will stay to tend the fires. You and I are to climb. You'll wear Huxby's leather trousers outside your own."

"But they're too small for me around the belt."

"They'll not be after a few days. You'll wear the jacket also."

A taste of hot marrow roused the girl's appetite. Hunger overcame her other cravings. She said nothing even when, at the end of the meal, her father drew on Huxby's flying suit over his clothes and started off with Garth.

Though Garth had spoken of a climb, he first led along the lake shore to the beginning of the muskeg swamp. Then turned and slanted gradually up through the belt of spruce trees until the west side of the trough was reached at timberline. He stopped to look at Huxby while Mr. Ramill caught his second wind. The mining engineer gave no heed to them. He was hard at work panning out gravel, midway up to the discovery stake.

Garth led across to the east side of the trough. After every half he started the portly millionaire on again as soon as he could draw a deep breath. They kept plodding up the tundra slope until at last Mr. Ramill's legs gave out. He staggered and collapsed. He lay, purple-faced and quivering, spent.

When asked to speak, he gasped an appeal: "Ka-quit! 'U'll kill-me!"

"No such luck," Garth bantered him. "It's only the fat. If it was your heart, you'd have died long before this. Open your coats and let the sun soak in."

The exhausted man turned flat on his back and basked. Within a few minutes he drowsed off. Garth let him nap a long two hours, then started him on up the long climb.

Three hours later found them still below the lower end of the glacier. Garth at last called a halt to the climb. He headed back.

Midway down to timberline, Ramill collapsed, so utterly spent that he could not get up even after a long rest. Garth took him on his back and packed him on down to the camp, without a halt.

Huxby and Miss Ramill were feasting. They had pried the moose leg out of the fire hole and broken off the clay shell. The meat had baked to juicy tenderness. Even the gristle was melted into gelatine.

When Garth laid her father in the leanto, the girl brought a big chunk of the best meat. But the millionaire climber was too exhausted even to eat. His daughter turned upon Garth.

"Another of your damned jokes! He's dying! You've killed him!"

Garth smiled approvingly. "So, after all, you're capable of feeling a little concern for someone else than yourself. Boil the cup two-thirds full of water, and put in enough of that sweet tea to cool it for drinking."

"The tea is not already. I've kept back Dad's share. I'll give it to him straight."

"You'll warm that water." The mining engineer stood up. "I've told you to speak respectfully to Miss Ramill."

Garth paid no more attention to him than to the buzz of a mosquito. The girl looked expectantly at her fiancé. He stood waiting for Garth to apologize. When Garth neither replied nor so much as glanced around at him, the engineer's cold assurance gave way to doubt. He turned and went down to the lake.

Miss Ramill's eyes widened. She glanced from his stiff back to the buckskin clad shoulders that had so lightly toted her father into camp. All this had been a matter of seconds. In another moment she was dashing over to the rill with the tin cup.

When she came to the leanto with the almost scalding hot mixture of boiled water and tea, her father muttered, between groans, that he did not want it. "No—no! Uh-oh-h! Let me die—in peace!"

Garth heaved up the lax head and shoulders, and held the cup to the quivering lips. "Drink, or I'll pour it down your throat."

A few minutes later the "dying" millionaire began to eat. He bolted down the juicy tender meat until sleep overtook him in the midst of a bite.

"Roll the blanket over him and let him sweat," Garth directed. "He'll wake up a new man. I'll wager he has worked off ten pounds of fat, to say nothing of the toxins he's burned up. Next climb he'll make the foot of the glacier."

Though spoiled, Lilith was far from being a fool. She had begun to realize that to get what she wanted, something more than wishing was necessary. Her father had gone over to Garth. Even Huxby had failed her. She could not believe her fiancé a coward. He was undoubtedly brave in his way. Garth had admitted as much. He had called the engineer a wolf, not a fox.

The rub was over for Garth. Miss Ramill's surrender meant that he was now the acknowledged master of the party. Huxby had also admitted the fact by going off, instead of following up his implied threat of attack. He, however, would require watching.

No Evidence That Ships

Founder in Sargasso Sea

Sargasso sea is the name given to a region between the Azores and West Indies where seaweed is kept in a slow swirl by the action of the Gulf stream and the equatorial current. The weed collects much in the same way that floating debris collects on the surface of a river back eddy or wash. On his first voyage, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News, Columbus noted this sea. The name comes from the Spanish word sargazo, meaning seaweed.

In the days of small sailing craft, navigation was hindered by the seaweed, and mariners sought to avoid the region. In this way was encouraged the legend that the sea is a graveyard of ships.

A scientific survey of the region was made in 1925 by William Beebe, who headed an expedition sent out by the New York Zoological society. He reported that only at certain seasons do the weeds collect in the "floating meadows" referred to by some observers, and that these surface mats of seaweed are soon scattered by the wind. Beebe cruised for a month in the Sargasso sea and found no rafts of seaweed sufficiently heavy to impede his progress, or even to excite attention. There is no evidence that the storybook references to lost ships floating about in the sea are based on fact.

Naming "Greenwich Village"

Two hundred years and more ago, when New York was only the tip of Manhattan island and the rest was given to pleasant farms, there lay to the north of the city a suburban community which the late Dutch owners had called the Bossen Bouerie. But the English, who had taken over the Dutch colony and renamed New Amsterdam New York, were beginning to call the Bossen Bouerie by the name of the London suburb Greenwich. It is not known exactly when this name was first applied, but a deed of 1721 speaks of "the Bossen Bouerie, alias Greenwich." In subsequent years "Greenwich Village" became a favorite suburban place of residence, until it was finally absorbed by its growing neighbor. But a good many old families still kept their homes within its precincts, and in one way or another it has always maintained sufficient distinctiveness to keep its name alive.

Castle Is Famed

The tiny city of Eisenach, Germany, famed for historic Wartburg castle, is also the place where Martin Luther retired under the pseudonym of "Junker Georg" to translate the Bible into German.

Lesson for December 22

MALACHI FORETELLS A NEW DAY

LESSON TEXT—Malachi 3:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me. Malachi 3:1.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Best Promise Comes True.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Kept His Best Promise.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Bringing in a Better Day.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Preparing the Way of the Lord.

(The lesson committee has provided as an alternative a Christmas lesson, using the text Matthew 2:1-12).

The subject of today's lesson is broader than the printed text. In order effectively to teach this lesson, the entire Book of Malachi should be surveyed. The prophet pointed out the sins of the corrupt priesthood, mixed marriages, and failure to pay tithes, with the portrayal of the coming judgment and glorious new day with Christ reigning in his glorious kingdom.

1. The Base Ingratitude of Israel (1:1-5).

God approached them with the tender affirmation, "I have loved thee." It was the burden of the prophet to declare this fact unto them (v. 1). So worldly were the people that they failed to discern God's good hand upon them. Israel's attitude toward God is shown in the skeptical question, "Wherein hast thou loved us?" (v. 2). Malachi answers this question by showing God's choice of Jacob and his passing by of Esau, his destruction of Edom and his saving of Israel.

2. God's Severe Indictment (1:6-2:17; 3:7-15).

1. Against the priests (1:6-2:9). They were guilty of

a. Profanity (1:6). Their profanity consisted in despising the name of God. To fail to honor God is to be profane. To use his name in any unbecoming way is to be guilty.

b. Sacrilege (1:7,8). Their sacrilegious act was in offering polluted bread and blemished sacrifices.

c. Greed (1:10). They were not willing even to open the doors of God's house without pay. Service to God should be out of a heart of love for him.

d. Weariness (1:12,13). Because of the absence of love, the routine of priestly duties became irksome.

e. Not teaching the law to the people (2:1-9). Those set apart to teach God's law to the people have a great responsibility and God will most assuredly demand an accounting.

2. Against the people (2:10-17; 3:7-15).

a. For ungodly marriages (2:11, 12). God's purpose in the prohibition of mixed marriages was that he might raise up a holy seed (v. 15). Marriage with the heathen would frustrate this purpose. Marriage of the believer with the unbeliever today brings confusion into the fold of God and turns aside his purpose.

b. Divorce (2:13-16). Divorce in Israel was the source of great sorrow. Even the tears of the wronged women covered the altar (v. 13). The offerings of the man who had thus treated his wife would be an abomination to God.

c. Public wrongs (3:5, 6).

(1) Sorcery or magical arts. This includes the practice of occult sciences, such as spiritism, necromancy, fortune telling.

(2) Adultery. This is a sin of wider extent than the direct parties concerned. It is a canker which gnaws in the very heart of society. Unfaithfulness to the marriage relation should be regarded as a public sin. Such sinners should be ostracized from society.

(3) False swearing.

(4) Oppression of the hireling, the widow, and the fatherless.

(5) Turning aside the stranger from his rights.

d. Withholding tithes from God (3:7-12). Failure to pay tithes is robbery of God. His claim upon Israel was a tenth, plus free will offerings. Our responsibility is to give as God prospers us (1 Cor. 16:1).

e. Blasphemy (3:13-15). They openly spake against God, saying that it was profitless and vain to serve him.

III. The Awful Judgment Which Shall Befall the Nation (3:15; 4:1-6).

1. By whom executed (v. 1). It is to be done by the Lord. All judgment hath been committed unto the Son of God (John 5:22, 30; cf. Acts 17:30, 31).

2. The time of (3:24-1). It will be, at the second coming of Christ. John the Baptist was the forerunner of his first coming. Elijah will be the forerunner of his second coming.

3. The result (3:3, 4, 16-18; 4:1, 2). For the righteous it will be a day of healing and salvation; for the wicked it will be a day of burning and destruction.

A Mother's Love

If there be aught surpassing human deed or word or thought, it is a mother's love!—De Spradaro.

Well-Doing

There is no well-doing, no God-like doing, that is not patient doing.—J. G. Holland.

Justice

To give every man that to which he is entitled, is indeed supreme justice.—Cleora.

PIGS AIN'T PIGS

"Pigs is pigs, maybe," observed Farmer Julian Brown of Kinston, N. C., "but mine ain't." His pigs, Brown said, "regard cleanliness next to godliness." That is why he rigged up a shower bath for the sow and her litter of six. "The pigs keep sleek and clean," he said, "and enjoy the shower immensely."

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes; feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

'Twas the Night Before Christmas

When all through the house
Not a creature was stirring,
Not even a mouse;

Late Christmas Dinner

by
Gertrude H. Walton

IMPATIENTLY Louise shoved the steaming pans and kettles into the warming oven. Looking down the driveway as she had done for almost two hours, she exclaimed:

"Of course Horton called that he might be late. But what is keeping sister and Hal, and Aunt Jen, Uncle Jim, Betty and Clyde? Six people invited to a Christmas dinner and all of them late! Accident? Surely not all of them in a heap along the roadside unless each bumped into the other hurrying because they are late to our dinner!" Louise was smiling even before a honk sent her outside.

"Drive Me to Larion Crossroads. Maybe We Will Meet Sister."

and Hal. Maybe they will know why the others are delayed. Sort of a news center at the crossroads, anyway."

"Pshaw! Don't worry. They probably think you will not have dinner promptly at 1 o'clock."

"But I told each one that we would have dinner promptly because I thought you boys might wish to hear the program at Baxter. Do you suppose they have all gone to the festival before coming here?"

"That's it, exactly! Let's go, too! Then we can all come home together to a grand Christmas reunion dinner," Horton interrupted.

"Come home to cold turkey, dressing, and potatoes reunion dinner, you mean," Louise snapped.

Hurrying home and eating lunch, Horton, with Louise a bit reluctant, started for Baxter, where a special festival of Christmas music and drama, an annual community affair, for many years, between rival towns, would be presented at the Community Center playhouse. Prizes were awarded to best productions from the two towns.

"The guests must have misunderstood my letter. Whatever it is, they have all 'misunderstood together,' Louise whined during applauding for the Edgewood performers in which Horton blattered his hands, clapping for his home community.

He seemed unsympathetic to Louise's further peevish questions:

"But not one of our guests are here that I can see. Do you glimpse Uncle's bald head, or sister's fur, or Betty's red hat?"

His First Christmas

by
Earle Hooker Eaton

RING up the Pole and telephone
Without a moment's pause,
Or by the wireless make it known
To dear old Santa Claus,
That Papa's Boy and Mama's Joy,
And Sister's Precious Mite,
While glad bells clang will gaily hang
His stocking up tonight!

"Ting-ling! Ting-ling! Hello, hello!
Is that you Santa, dear?
Be sure your reindeer hear your 'Whoa'!
When you are passing here.
What's that? You'll come and bring a drum,
A jumping-jack and ball,
And other toys for little boys?
Dear Saint, you're best of all!"

'Tis Christmas morn, and to his shop
Old Santa homeward flies;
'Tis five o'clock, but open pop
The baby's roguish eyes.
We're dead for sleep, but out we creep,
And dress at once to get
What Santa kind, has left behind
For Toddlekins, our pet.

From Pole to Pole there's surely not
A babe more pleased than he,
And how he crows, the happy tot,
And gurgles in his glee.
The jumping-jack, the ducks that quack,
The drum, the horns, the ball,
The chicks that peep, the horse, the sheep,
He tries to eat them all!

On this his first glad Christmas lark,
The toys with blocks he pelts,
He makes old Noah wish the Ark
Had landed somewhere else!
A soldier blue he breaks in two,
A puncture gives the drum,
He fills the air with legs and hair,
And then—he sucks his thumb!

The Sand-Man's surely come to town,
And soft is mummy's lap;
Clear up the clock and snuggle down,
'Tis time to take a nap.
Then rock-a-bye, close each blue eye,
Rest, my darling, rest!
(He's fast asleep, with baby sheep Hugged tight against his breast!)

After the program Horton and Louise watched every means of exit for their guests, then hurried home, arriving at five o'clock. At sight of the left-over dinner, Louise sobbed:

"Never saw such a frost. What on Adam's earth could have happened? What have we—have I done to deserve such snubs?" She was almost suspicious that Horton had something to do with the absence of their guests. She leaped to the jangling of the telephone. Anything was better than silence—or was it?

"Ye—yes—yes—we'll be there—at once!" The receiver clicked.

"Horton, hurry. Someone needs you—at Herald's Corners. Hal called. No, Hal and sister are not hurt, but someone else. You run on and I'll stay to prepare beds."

Horton, Hal, and Louise's sister soon arrived with a man, woman, and small child who had been buried under an automobile after being struck by a hit-and-run driver. When Hal found them, hours before, they were unconscious. After return to consciousness the doctor had consented for Hal to drive them to Horton's for the night, as no hospital was nearer than one hundred miles.

While administering to the injured ones in the spotless beds Louise provided, Uncle Jim and Aunt Jen arrived with Betty and Clyde, son and daughter-in-law, at exactly six o'clock! "We were determined to be on time for dinner," Aunt Jen called innocently.

"Yes, you are in time—to help nurse these injured strangers," Louise answered, trying not to look discomfited. "Jim had too bad a cold to go to the program at Baxter. So Clyde said he would drive our car and we would all come together. Clyde could not get away from the store until noon. We thought you would probably go to the program if we were not here to hinder during the afternoon. And we'd get here in time for your six o'clock dinner. Let us help make these injured ones comfortable. Or, we'll get the dinner on the table while you attend them," Aunt Jen rattled on.

"Yes, You Are in Time—to Help Nurse These Injured Strangers."

"The date of the dinner's coldness seemed not to matter. One thing I've learned, that a cold dinner is no less palatable after eight hours, than for two hours' wait. It's all because of two times—two dates for dinner—12 o'clock—and six o'clock! Two things learned today!" Louise recited to herself the text of the letter sent to her guests, and as nearly as she could remember it was worded:

"Can you come for Christmas dinner? Come early if the men wish to go with Horton to the program at Baxter. We women will gossip the afternoon away until the men return. Dinner promptly then!"

"Dinner at six—for six late guests! But it all turned out right. The poor people were rescued by Hal's coming in the afternoon. Hal said that since he had the afternoon for driving he would leisurely drive by way of Herald's Corners to see the new viaduct just completed. You and I, dear, attended the program together. Uncle Jim needed a driver. Next time I'll make it plain which dinner hour to expect my guests—at one o'clock or at six o'clock on Christmas!" Louise smiled the next day after the injured strangers were on their way, and the guests had returned to their homes.

Inexpensive, Easy Patchwork Quilts

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Patchwork quilts as a rule are elaborate, cost quite a bit and represent many days of tedious work. This work and cost can be cut down to a minimum as shown in the illustration. Any of these designs can be used on eighteen nine-inch blocks and so arranged to make a full size quilt. About three ounces or one yard of prints is all that is required for the patchwork. Folder No. 536 in colors illustrates four ways to assemble these different designs, also cut out diagrams for six different patches like the picture. Information about yardage required for back, border and blocks is also given.

The folder No. 536 and folder No. 6 with other quilting information will be mailed upon receipt of 10 cents, or send us 19 cents and we will send folder and sufficient beautiful patches to make up the patchwork on one of these simple quilts.

Address Home Craft Co., Dept. D, Nineteenth and St. Louis Ave., St. Louis. Inclose a stamped addressed envelope for reply when writing for any information.

Riksdag Votes by Electricity

Votes taken in the Riksdag, the parliament of Sweden, are counted by electricity. On the desk of each deputy are three buttons. When a vote is taken the deputy presses the button which records his opinion, and within a minute the total results appear in luminous figures behind the seat of the president.

We're Still Getting Mad On as the Savages Do

When Tom Sawyer and the new boy first met and took one another's measure they worked themselves up to the point of combat by passing insults and dares. In the Arabian desert, when the tribes feel the urge for battle, they prepare for it by dispatching impudent verse back and forth. When one side feels that the impertinence can only be atoned for in blood the shouts give way to blows.

All very childish, of course. But is it so much different from the civilized methods? Young Italians threaten the British embassy in Rome and break the windows of British places of business. The British hurry troops to Egypt. The inspired press of Italy is as contemptuous of all things British as are the Bedouin versifiers of their tribal enemies. And Britain moves up warships from Gibraltar to Malta, in the very shadow of the Italian toe, as though to pinch it. The principle is the same all the way through, and even the practice does not increase greatly in dignity.

Capacity for Improvement Even in Worst Character

Every wrong propensity may be finally subdued or considerably corrected; every right one may be assisted by additional motives and carried on to yet higher perfection. Even in the worst characters some capacity for virtuous improvement, of which no vestige has yet been observed, may be discovered or drawn forth.—Blair.

HOLIDAY PROGRAMS AT ST.
PETER'S CHURCH, FRANKFORT

The different active organizations of St. Peter's church are preparing a series of excellent programs for the holidays.

For Sunday evening, Dec. 22nd, the choir is sponsoring an evening of music. There will be solo and choir numbers, songs by the congregation in German and English and Pantomimes portraying different incidents of the Christmas story. At 7 p. m. the church orchestra will render a program of Christmas music preceding the program at 7:30
p. m.

For Tuesday evening the Bible school is sponsoring a program by the Beginners Primary, Junior and Intermediate departments. The high point of this program will be the Christmas Pageant: "The Bells of Bethlehem."

On Christmas Day there will be a German service at 9 a. m. and an English service at 10 a. m.

On Thursday, December 26, the Ladies' Aid Society in addition to the regular lunch are preparing a special Christmas play which will be presented at 8 p. m.

For Sylvester Eve the Young Peoples group of the church is preparing an elaborate four-hour program which as in former years will culminate in a midnight service.

The public is cordially invited to come and enjoy the good things prepared for them in these different programs.

Thru a mechanical duplication error the entire 32,000 series of trade coupons issued by The Mokena Business Association has been declared void. The business men are asking all those who hold any number in the 32,000 series to surrender these coupons and new coupons will be issued in their place. The voided coupons can be brought to the business places or the McGovney real estate office Saturday night to be exchanged for new coupons.

Christmas Greetings

At this season it is fitting that we express to our friends and customers appreciation of their Good Will. We count ourselves fortunate in being among those to wish you the blessings of Christmas and the New Year.

Here's How to Decorate with Christmas Lights

Making the home a shining example of holiday good-will by attractive Christmas lighting decorations has become "just an old American custom". Here are some practical illustrations of what can be done.

The owner of this home used cleverly placed floodlights and silhouette cutouts of Christmas figures, supplemented by beautifully trimmed evergreens at the entrance.

An ingenious effect is produced by the shadow of a small cutout tree cast by a lamp placed behind it. Colored lamps in the doorway lanterns and colored paper in the upper windows add to the trim, festive appearance.

This picture shows how festoons of lights can be used to emphasize the important lines of the house. Indoor decorations in or near the windows add interest.

Candle forms at the entrance can be made of painted tubes of tin or cardboard and a flame-colored lamp. In addition, homes like this with light toned trim are made distinctive with simple floodlighting.

Falls Into Thresh Machine And Is Instantly Killed

Harry Mundt, 40 years old, a farmer living four and one half miles southwest of Plainfield, was instantly killed Saturday afternoon when he slipped and fell into a threshing machine he was operating on the Louis Fisher farm one and one-half miles West of Plainfield. His body was horribly mangled by the whirling, rapidly moving blades of the machine. Mr. Mundt was known in this section.

Brother of Mokena
Woman Killed

He was rushed to the St. Anthony hospital in Rockford but because of the nature of the injury, the intense shock and loss of blood little hope was given for his recovery and he died shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Edward Easton was born in Rockford 24 years ago and had spent all his life on the farm in Harlem.

In addition to his parents, Supervisor and Mrs. Byron Easton, he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Robt. Gaddis of Mokena, and Charlotte at home;
a brother Byron Jr., also at home;
his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Easton Sr., of Harlem and two uncles Boyd Easton and Steve Thompson both of Rockford.

He was soon to be married to Miss Evelyn Reed of Marengo, Ill., who is a nurse in the Rockford City hospital.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon in the Harlem Methodist church at 2 o'clock with the Rev. Wm. J. Slosser, pastor of Loves
Park Pres. church officiating.

Burial was in the Harlem cemetery.

Mrs. W. Combs
Entertains Friends
At Luncheon

Mrs. Wallace B. Combs entertained friends at the song poetry luncheon of the American Speech committee, Chicago Woman's club
Saturday, December 7th. J. Manley Phelps, De Paul University, Francesca Miller, poetess and Prof. Fred B. Wise, celebrated tenor were the artists presented by Mrs. Charles Samson. Mrs. Archibald Freer, Mrs.
Henry Hoyt Hilton, were honored guests. Friends at Mrs. Combs' table were Mrs. E. G. C. Williams of Danville, Ill., Mrs. Mathew Wall, Long Beach, Ind., and Mrs. Frank Baldwin, Tinley Park.

Following the afternoon program leisure hours were delightfully spent in the spacious lounge and library until supper was announced and served in the Lobdell room. Turkey and all holiday goodies were served.
